Rev. Dr. Shields' Able Address at the Columbian University.

What Ought to Result From the Late Congress of Religious - Some

Yesterday afternoon the big lecture room of the Columbian University was crowded with an audience of people that represented all the various denominational creeds of the city that compose the Protestant Church. On the platform were seated four ministers of as many different denominations. In the audience were scores of ministers and laymen by the hundred, all of whom are interested in the subject of church unity, and were attracted by a

Rev. Dr. Butler opened the meeting with an earnest prayer for a blessing on the sided at the meeting, and in introducing the speaker of the afternoon told of what had been done by committees appointed to pave the way for a fuller and more complete union of all denominations. Dr. Shields' paper was a carefully pre-on his part. In beginning his address Dr. Shields said that perhaps the most important feature of the world's fair was the great congress of religions, but whether its teaching's should pass away like the tower of Babel or remain in strength as a pentecostal blessing would depend upon the uses that are made of them. The principal lesson to be learned from the congress was not the supremacy of Christianity—that had all been demonstrated before—but the necessity for church unity.

Church unity, he said, must be distinguished from church union, which is but a grouping together of possibly inharmonious elements. It must also be kept aloof from the idea of church uniformity. In its best idea there may be variety in unity as well as unity in variety. Church unity would not ignore our common religious beliefs, but would simply muster together the forces of our common faith. Dr. Shields thought that the time of need for denominational differences was past. There is no great principle for which the denominationalist buttles that may not be greatly the state. Shields said that perhaps the most imgreat principle for which the denomination

The speaker recapitulated the various difficulties that are said to beset the path of a more complete unity, and showed that none were insurmountable. The principal difficulty, he considered, lies not in the atti-tude of the churches, but of governments and society.

Then, again, it had been said that unity might be desirable, but was not feasible. This, he thought, was a mistake, for in this This, he thought, was a mistake, for in this republican government of ours there is an example of "one from many." Why, then, could not the religious people of the world come together quite as well. Looking back over the history of the church in the past he could not but think that what had been might yet be again. All the conditions were never before as favorable as now to the realization of the idea of one catholic and apostolic church. "Politically we are now in the same boat with 8,000,000 of Roman Catholics, and sooner or later we must unite with them against mutiny and shipwreck, in other words, sectarianism and infidelity."

Churches Have More in Common Dr. Shields went on to show how it is that all the churches are having more and more in common, and said that it was quite possible that the left wing of Protestantism and the right wing of Catholicism may yet swing toward the center. Unity to be practicable and desirable must represent the concensus of all existing churches in doctrine, ritual and polity. If all denominations were seeking for the great essentials that they have in common, leaving out the non-essentials of dogma, they could not do better than to adopt the four principles laid down in the Chicago-Lambeth proposals. The historic episcopacy is not the sole possession of the church known as the Protestant Episcopal Church, but would yet be represented in our midst if that church should cease to exist, and Dr. Shields discussed at length the question of the extent to which other denominations might adopt the principle. In speaking of the propriety of taking the four articles of the Lambeth proposals as a common meeting ground for all, he said that the value of the first three was so evident as to need no demonstration, but the unifying value of the historic episcopale was not so generally admitted. After considering all the pros and cons with some care, however, he maintained that with all the facts that we have down in the Chicago-Lambeth proposals. and cons with some care, however, he maintained that with all the facts that we have in view it is impossible to think of a unity that does not rest upon this idea. For example, orthodoxy and liberty can exist in presbytery only under the mild rule of the historic episcopate.

Processes to Be Pursued. As for the process to be uprsued in se curing church unity he would favor that of reunion with organic growth in preference to consolidation or confederation. Dr. Shields closed his part of the discussion with a sketch of ideal unity based upon the Lambeth proposals. The way to complete unity may be long and rough, but all the signs are pointing in that direction, and he saw much to hope for the future. This is not the polemic age, but the Iranic age in the development of Christianity. The growth of ecclesiastical tendencies means only the growth of church unity. He closed with the statement that what all denominations needed most of all was to get better acquainted with each other.

Discussed by Clergymen. At the conclusion of Dr. Shields' address, which was received with continued anplause, an opportunity was given to those in the audience to discuss it. Rev. Charles A. Stakely of the First Baptist Church was called upon. He said that while he and his people were earnestly hoping for church unity he did not think it could be secured on the basis suggested by Dr. Shields, for he did not think the speaker had relieved it either from the charge of ecclesiasticism or of impracticableness. Rev. Dr. John H. Elliott of the Church of
